Honorable Robert Cutler
Administrative Assistant to the President
The White House
Washington, D. C.

My dear Mr. Cutler:

Index
As of possible interest to you, there is attached a compilation of information, together with charts, reflecting the liaison activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in connection with its coordination in the internal security field with other governmental agencies. There is information contained therein relating to our domestic and foreign liaison activities, our membership on intelligence committees, both intra-governmental and international, and our furnishing of information to other governmental agencies from our files.

With assurances of my highest regards,

Sincerely yours,

Special Agent [redacted] discussed, on the afternoon of February 2, 1953, the Bureau's liaison program with General Cutler who has taken Admiral Souers' place and who will closely coordinate the work of the National Security Council and its subcommittees. [redacted] advised General Cutler that he is your personal representative for handling matters with the National Security Council and that he has been cleared for all types of information.

General Cutler mentioned the fact that he would like to attend the IIC meeting to be held this week, and he was furnished the formal invitation from the IIC to attend the meeting. General Cutler noted that the National Security Council meeting which had been scheduled an hour later than the IIC meeting will not be held and that he will be able to attend the IIC meeting. [redacted] also furnished a copy of the agenda for the meeting to General Cutler, at which time he glanced over the agenda briefly. He noted that the IIC is apparently being run on a very businesslike basis and is obtaining results. He agreed that there is still some progress to be made in the internal security field and noted that "one or two old dogs" had come to his attention in so far as ICIS action is concerned. He had reference to the paper concerning access to U.S. classified information by representatives of foreign governments.

Cutler expressed his appreciation to you for the fact that this close liaison is made available to him, and he stated that he intends to take full advantage of that liaison. During the discussion, [redacted] noted that there are occasions when mutual problems become involved or get out of line and that the Bureau is anxious to help in any way possible. [redacted] also noted that occasionally the Bureau finds it necessary to go to the National Security Council in order to straighten out some of these matters, and Cutler stated that "My door is open to you at all times."

Dear Mr. Cutler:

Mr. J. Patrick Coyne has advised that you have expressed an interest in attending the next meeting of the Interdepartmental Intelligence Conference.

It will be a pleasure to have you meet with us, and, as you know, the next meeting of the IIC is scheduled to be held in my office at 2:30 p.m., February 4, 1953.

The other members of the IIC and I feel that there is still considerable work to be done in the field of internal security, and we are looking forward with pleasure to working closely with you and the National Security Council in this connection.

Sincerely yours,

Chairman

You may recall that recently it was announced that Robert Cutler had been designated as Administrative Assistant to the President and that his duties would be in connection with the National Security Council.

It has been determined by Special Agent [] that Cutler is charged directly with handling all national security matters including coordination of the National Security Council and the committees which are established thereunder. He is interested in receiving all information of a security nature which should be called to the attention of the National Security Council or to the attention of the President. That information of a personal nature, such as irregularities of prominent Government employees, which was formerly furnished to the President through Admiral Souers will not be handled by Cutler but by Sherman Adams, the Assistant to the President.

Arrangements have been made by Special Agent [] to meet with Mr. Cutler personally, at which time the Bureau's liaison arrangements will be explained and liaison firmly established. [] has been advised that Cutler is extremely interested in his new work; that he feels the IIC-ICIS arrangement is effective, particularly in so far as the IIC is concerned; that he is very impressed with the monographs which have been prepared by the Bureau concerning Communist activities and that, in all probability, the affairs of the National Security Council will under his direction be conducted on a very businesslike basis.

Mr. Cutler has expressed an interest in attending an early meeting of the IIC, which fact I understand was called to your attention by [] yesterday.

Special Agent [] will closely follow the developments in connection with the National Security Council, particularly as it relates to the IIC and the ICIS. [] has, as you know, handled the liaison with the National Security Council for approximately three years, is Secretary of the IIC and is fully conversant with matters in which Cutler will have a direct interest.

Attached hereto is a suggested memorandum to all Bureau Officials and Supervisors calling their attention to the fact that security matters should be called to the attention of Cutler and matters of personal information to the President should, at least for the time being, be called to the attention of Sherman Adams, the Assistant to the President.

ADDENDUM: 1/28/53

Mr. Coyne telephonically advised on the morning of January 28, 1953, that Cutler had just contacted him and inquired as to when the next IIC meeting will be held. Coyne advised that he would check and advise Cutler in this regard. Coyne stated that he had made no commitment to Cutler. It is noted that an agenda is being prepared for a regular IIC meeting to be held on February 4, 1953. It is suggested that an invitation be issued to Cutler to attend this meeting.

Attached is a clipping from the "Washington Post and Times-Herald" of March 7, 1955, which states that the White House is expected to announce early this week the resignation of General Robert Cutler as Special Assistant to the President on National Security Affairs.

Inquiries have been made from time to time within the NSC Staff by Special Agent [redacted] and it has been previously determined that Cutler desired to return to Boston, but felt it his duty to remain as a Special Assistant to the President. Inquiries today by [redacted] have revealed that the NSC Staff feel that Cutler has decided to return to Boston and that it will, in all probability, be announced by the President this week. It is noted that Cutler has not confided in his Staff along this line, but all indications are that Cutler will leave shortly and return to Boston.

Cutler to Quit As Assistant To President

The White House is expected to announce early this week the resignation of Boston banker Robert Cutler as President Eisenhower's Special Assistant on National Security Affairs.

The President and Mrs. Eisenhower will give a private "farewell" party Saturday at the White House, it was learned yesterday.

The Bay Stater, former adviser to the late James V. Forrestal, Secretary of Navy and Defense has been one of the President's closest friends and confidants since the early days of the 1952 presidential campaign. Cutler tried to resign last December but the President persuaded him to stay on.

Cutler is on leave as president of the old Colony Trust Company.

Dear Edgar:

My successor as [redacted]
[redacted] who recently was down here to dine at the White House, has written me the enclosed letter, relative to one aspect of juvenile delinquency.

The National Association for Mental Health is having the kick-off dinner for its Campaign in Boston on the evening of Friday,
May 6. At the Red Sox - Yankee Ball Game that afternoon, Jimmy Piersall will participate in ceremonies at the home plate, and will be guest of honor at the dinner.

You may have read his article in the Saturday Evening Post,
"They Called Me Crazy, and I Was."

Because of your recent article in the American Magazine,
"How Safe is Your Youngster", [redacted] wonders whether it would be possible for you to attend this ceremony, and speak on the subject of your article. Certainly, no one could bring home the truth which you so well know better than you yourself.

If you will agree to come, I certainly would agree to be

Security Council Sparkplug

Robert Cutler has been one of the most important and least known men in Washington. As assistant to the President for national security affairs, he has had a preeminent part in giving the National Security Council the new meaning and prestige which Mr. Eisenhower has sought for it. The Security Council has all but eclipsed the Cabinet on questions of broad strategy. This shy, witty Boston banker has been the ideal staff agent for the President—quiet, unobtrusive and completely dedicated, and with a singular ability to cut through nonessentials in keeping attention focused on the major problems and in following through on decisions. Through his own choice he has led a virtually monastic existence in the Capital, shunning social engagements and contacts even though previously in private life he had been known as the life of the party. Whether this self-enforced seclusion has helped build proper appreciation of the work of the Security Council is debatable, but it certainly has served to keep the council staff out of embarrassing controversy. Even less is known here publicly of Mr. Cutler's successor, Dillon Anderson, a Houston attorney who has served as a consultant to the Security Council since 1953. We wish him well—and for Mr. Cutler a well-deserved release when he returns to his post as chairman of the board of Boston's Old Colony Trust Co.

Mr. Cutler's Contribution

As the President's special assistant for national security affairs, Robert Cutler has rendered distinguished service in one of the most sensitive of all Federal jobs. And now that he has resigned from the post, to return to private life and his native Boston, it may rightly be said that the country at large is indebted to him for important labors that cannot be publicized in detail because they have had to do with top-secret matters of defense and foreign policy.

For Mr. Cutler has been the operating executive of the National Security Council. As such, in addition to having played a major role in reinvigorating the NSC as the Government's highest policy-making agency, he has participated in procedures that have resulted in decisions of the greatest import to the United States and the free world in general. Further, besides having served as a key administrator privy to secrets of the most vital sort, he has been perhaps the closest of the President's confidants and personal advisers—a man, because of the unique sensitivity of his duties, and not because of any lack of natural gregariousness, has kept himself out of the limelight and carried on his work with the utmost discretion and a real passion for anonymity.

It is because of this that relatively very few Americans know anything about Mr. Cutler. But the Nation, even though it has seldom seen his name in the headlines, owes him thanks none the less for what he has contributed to it since President Eisenhower called him to the White House. He is leaving his post in excellent shape for Dillon Anderson, his successor, and he has every reason to take proper pride in the fine example he has set as a public servant.

Dear General Cutler:

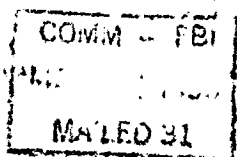

I have received your note of March 28, 1955,
and the letter you enclosed from [redacted]

Your invitation for me to participate in the ceremonies of the National Association for Mental Health on May 6, 1955, in Boston is a great honor, especially since you have so graciously offered to be the Toastmaster.
I have reviewed my schedule with the hope that I ~~could~~ definitely plan to be with you. Unfortunately, I ~~find~~ there is just no way possible for me to accept, and I sincerely regret this decision all the more in view of your interest.

I would appreciate it if you would convey my deepest regrets to [redacted] and thank him for his very generous comments concerning my article "How Is Your Youngster?" which appeared in the March, 1955, issue of "The American Magazine." I am returning his letter which was addressed to you.

Sincerely yours,

Dear General Cutler:

The members of the Interdepartmental Intelligence Conference would like you to know that as you return to private life you carry with you our very best wishes for every personal and professional success. We are indeed sorry to see you leave the Government service but are proud to have been a part of the team which functioned so well under your leadership.

Your understanding, interest, and cooperation in connection with the internal security problems which so vitally affect our country have been deeply appreciated and the effectiveness of the IIC has been aided and enhanced by your interest in these matters.

We will be pleased to see you at any time that you are in Washington and hope that you will call upon us when you are here.

Cutler Returning To White House In Security Post

Robert Cutler, Boston banker, is coming back to the White House in his old job as special assistant to President Eisenhower for National Security Council affairs.

The White House announced late yesterday appointment of Mr. Cutler to take over on January 6 the position he previously held from January, 1953, to April, 1955.

Since leaving the White House in 1955, Mr. Cutler has been serving as chairman of the board of directors of the Old Colony Trust Co. in Boston.

He was succeeded as special assistant to the President by Dillon Anderson, Houston, (Tex.), lawyer who resigned last spring. William H. Jackson, who replaced Mr. Anderson, has resigned effective January 1.

Puritan—Up to a Point

Robert Cutler

One of the legends of the Eisenhower Administration

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 23 —

At 10 o'clock this morning, —and precisely at 10—a big black notebook with multicolored pages and the name Robert Cutler in gold letters on the cover was placed on the Cabinet table in the White House.

President Eisenhower and the National Security Council were about to discuss disarmament and other questions of national policy.

Man in the News Robert Cutler, the President's special assistant for national security affairs was there, as he had been on two hundred or more Thursday mornings since 1953, to explain and record and make sure that everything would be precise and tidy and unmistakably clear.

Bobby Cutler, the Boston banker (or fiduciary, as he prefers it) is one of the legends of the Eisenhower Administration.

In the National Security Council, he sits at the "apex of government" (his own description), where American diplomacy, economic power and military potential come together to determine the national strategy.

No man in the Government, with the possible exception of the President, knows so many of the nation's strategic secrets.

Yet no other man so high in the Administration is so little known outside the President's immediate circle. Even to that circle, Bobby Cutler is some-

Mr. Cutler is a proper Bostonian, tall and spare of frame, with the unadorned features of the New England Puritan. He is a Rabelaisian with a salty vocabulary and such a repertory of bawdy stories as only a very proper man could afford to tell.

He is an earnest Episcopalian, who might be mistaken for a successful preacher. And he is a man who can move so quickly from ribaldry to piety and back to ribaldry again as to leave his friends with an uneasy feeling that they laughed in the wrong place.

He is, as a government official, a "slave driver" who can force his staff to work as hard as he works himself. As his subordinates have learned, he can be at the end of the long day, with a bourbon old-fashioned in his hand, a charming and generous friend.

Finally, Mr. Cutler is a bachelor's bachelor, but a bachelor who has had a lifelong love affair. It is a love affair with the city of Boston—"The loveliest city in the world." As a fund-raiser for Boston charities, he has no peer.

A Boston editor once quoted these lines about Benjamin Franklin as equally descriptive of Mr. Cutler:

"He enjoyed himself among the girls and loved women all his life, but no woman, however charming she was, could completely capture his mind and imagination. He loved politics, too, and the struggle of commerce. But he never considered his enterprises in these fields, picturesque and intoxicating as they were, as ends in themselves. Nothing could satisfy him entirely but the feeling he was serving men by leading them."

In the Eisenhower Administration, Mr. Cutler has been leading men by serving the President.

The Cutlers of Massachusetts date back to 1636. Robert Cutler was born in Brookline June 12, 1895. He was graduated from Harvard with many honors in 1916, served as a lieutenant with the United States Army in France and Germany, and went back to take his law degree at Harvard in 1922.

There is a story that he studied law to develop his mind for a writing career. He did write two novels, "Louisburg Square" and "The Speckled Bird," and he still contributes occasionally to the magazines.

Most of his business career has been with the Old Colony Trust Company, of which he became president and chairman. During World War II, he served in the War Department under Secretary Henry L. Stimson, worked out the difficult plan for soldier voting and was made a brigadier general.

He became one of the early Eisenhower supporters, raised money for the 1952 campaign and acted as speech-writer and handyman on the campaign train.

Reluctantly he left Boston in 1953 to become President Eisenhower's aide for national security affairs, a post he has since held except for an interruption of twenty months in 1955-56.

His admirers and critics agree that he has brought order, precision and driving force to the Council's work. His critics add that he has been somewhat handicapped by his lack of experience in foreign relations and a tendency at times to consider a neatly drafted report the answer to a complex world problem.

In Boston, they have a different criticism. Two Boston Brahmins, the story goes, met one day on Beacon Hill.

"I hear from Washington," said the first, "that Bobby Cutler is making quite a name for himself."

"Yes," said the second, "but only nationally."

Dear Edgar:

[redacted] of Tabor Academy in Marion, Massachusetts, tells me that he has extended an invitation to you to speak on Friday evening, June 3, 1960, at the commencement-alumni banquet of the School.

I want to add an expression of hope that you will be able to accept this invitation.

Tabor Academy is a fine old School. I have during the last fifteen years twice spoken at the commencement-alumni banquet. In addition to the young men, many of whom are in training for the sea, there are present a good many sturdy citizens from the area of Cape Cod. Other speakers at the commencement-alumni banquet have been General Romulo, Ambassador Houghton, and people of that type.

I am sure that you would have things to say to this group of young people, from 13 to 19 years of age, and to the families and alumni who flock to the Dinner, which would be good for them to hear. In fact, I said the same thing to [redacted]

I am very busy now with the organizational steps for the new Inter-American Development Bank. The organizational meetings will be held in El Salvador early in February. After that, I shall be once more (if I am confirmed by the Senate) a resident of Washington.

Sincerely yours

Robert Cutler

Dear Bobby:

CUTLER

Many thanks for your letter of January 8, 1960, and for the emphasis you placed on the invitation extended to me by [redacted] to speak at Tabor Academy on June 3, 1960. Due to the extreme uncertainty of my very heavy schedule, I have been forced to advise [redacted] that I will be unable to be present. In light of your personal interest, I would like very much to be able to fill this important engagement; however, I know you will understand my position.

Please accept my very best wishes that your organizational work meets with every success, and of course, we are looking forward to having you back in Washington as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

EDGAR
